International Maritime Security Exposition: Building Partnerships for Security, stability and Prosperity

National Defense Strategy

Today, we are emerging from a period of strategic atrophy, aware that our competitive military advantage has been eroding. We are facing increased global disorder, characterized by decline in the long-standing rules-based international order—creating a security environment more complex and volatile than any we have experienced in recent memory. Interstate strategic competition, not terrorism, is now the primary concern in U.S. national security.

National Defense Strategy

China is a strategic competitor using predatory economics to intimidate its neighbors while militarizing features in the South China Sea. Russia has violated the borders of nearby nations and pursues veto power over the economic, diplomatic, and security decisions of its neighbors. As well, North Korea's outlaw actions and reckless rhetoric continue Despite the defeat of ISIS's physical caliphate, threats to stability remain ... and threaten peace more broadly.

National Defense Strategy

This increasingly complex security environment is defined by rapid technological change (and) challenges from adversaries in every operating domain... A more lethal, resilient, and rapidly innovating Joint Force, combined with a robust constellation of allies and partners, will sustain American influence and ensure favorable balances of power that safeguard the free and open international order.

Indo-Pacific Box Score

- For the first time since WWII the US has a peer strategic competitor across economic and military elements of national power.
- The PRC is building its economic and security lines of communication, while challenging the existing economic and security structures which have enabled peace and unprecedented prosperity.

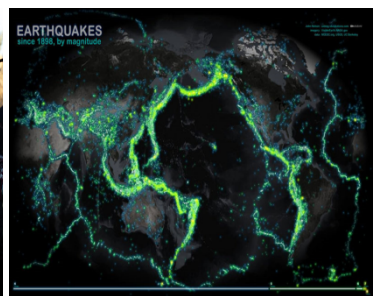

Indo-Pacific Box Score

- Russia remains an existential threat to the US and operates in the Pacific.
- Violent extremism has manifested itself in the Indo-Pacific.
- No matter the outcome with North Korea, there will be volatilities.
- The DoD no longer leads innovation but is desperately trying to stay up with it.
- More than ever, the US needs its friends, allies and partners in the Indo-Pacific.
